

JAMES GALLAGHER

United States Representative / Farmer

Age: 45

I'm a sixth generation California farmer and problem solver who has dedicated my career to fighting for Northern California families and rural communities. Growing up on my family's farm, I learned the value of hard work and understand the challenges facing working families and small businesses because I have lived them firsthand.

In the California Legislature, I earned a reputation as one of Sacramento's most effective lawmakers by delivering results for the North State.

I held PG&E accountable by writing the law that made wildfire settlement payments 100 percent tax free, and led the effort to quadruple wildfire prevention funding and ensure victims were fully compensated. I fought to lower energy costs by authoring legislation to reduce utility rates by 30 percent and led the effort to suspend the gas tax.

I exposed billions in government waste, fraud, and abuse by demanding audits and reforms to protect taxpayer dollars. I helped save rural hospitals by protecting access to emergency care for Northern California families. I also protected our water supply and environment by securing funding to restore river corridors and preserve water rights.

I'm honored to earn the endorsement of North State Senator Brian Dahle and countless local leaders. Today, in Congress, I am focused on lowering the cost of living, making energy more affordable, protecting access to quality health care, and ensuring taxpayers have an honest and accountable government. I believe elected officials should spend less time on political theater, listen to the people they represent, and deliver results.
